

Death café founder and artist to chat about 'Death and Time'.

AN upcoming Huntly event will take on some big questions.

The event later this month will take on death and time.

As part of her long-term project In the Wink of a Daisy, artist Petra Pennington has invited independent celebrant Anne Ritchie to join her for a philosophical conversation on death and time.

Ms Ritchie is also the founder of the Huntly Death Cafe, giving her a unique perspective on the issues.

Following the panel discussion, audience members will have the opportunity to set out their thoughts and questions.

As well as stimulating discourse, the free Deveron event will boast tea, coffee and cake.

The discussion will take place on Saturday, February 25, at 10am in Square Deal.

In the Wink of a Daisy is a project which aims to explore time in its many forms.

Over the last few months, Petra has been inviting people to respond to this theme in a series of writing call outs - where she realised that time is inseparable from that of death for Huntly folk.

To book your seat at the event search for Deveron Projects on Eventbrite, visit the Deveron Projects website, or click here.

Organisers stressed that the event is not aiming to provide support for people grieving.

People requiring a support group or grief counselling, can contact local mental health organisation Networks of Wellbeing to find out about services you can access.