

Posters and fliers around the town encourage young people to join a climate action group.

Shout out for climate club

THE Huntly-based arts organisation Deveron Projects are on the lookout for young people to join a new Youth Climate Justice Club.

The group is reaching out to people who are aged 14 and 25 who live in or around Huntly.

Aimed at young people with concerns about the climate crisis, the club will be taking action to counter the challenge faced together through gardening, cooking, writing manifestos, going on trips, hanging out and exploring what the climate breakdown means for the world right now.

The club is part of artist in residence

Hussein Mitha's new project The World is Ours, In Spite of All which aims to explore how young people can be involved in reversing climate change.

The club will meet every second Friday between 4pm and 6pm in Square Deal, and transport can be provided if needed.

Anyone interested can get in touch with Deveron Projects by email to info@deveron-projects.com, on Instagram @deveronprojects, on facebook @townisthevenue or dropping their details into Deveron Projects office at the Brander with their name and contact details before Monday, April 25.
