

Screenprinters hold up their top-quality bags.

Trying their hand at the skill.

Deveron Projects events for art and culture.

Fresh prints hung up to dry.

A printed bag being sewn up.

Screenprinting workshop

A SCREENPRINTING workshop packed Huntly's Square Deal with beautifully-designed posters, bags and booklets earlier this month.

Glass-based artist Petra Pennington taught people at the free workshop how to screenprint a whole host of items and also read through texts attendees had written in advance.

The texts were produced in response to an open call for writing on the theme of time, and they inspired the designs which were later printed at the July 2 workshop.

The 11 printed images were created by Ms Pennington and explored time in Huntly, time as a routine, time as currency and even time and death.

The event, put on with help from Deveron Projects, was part of a packed July schedule for the arts group.

As part of the Friday Lunch series, on July 15, archaeologist Dr Murray Cook, who is project director of the Battlehill Prehistoric Landscape Project.

The archaeological dig in Huntly's Battlehill now in its 21st year.

The workshop gave great tips on better screenprinting.

mctear's 1842

Complimentary whisky collections

McTear's are making it even easier to sell your whisky at auction with our free collection service.

For information and valuations, please contact our whisky specialist, Ewan Thomson.

whisky@mctears.co.uk | 0141 810 2880

mctears.co.uk | 31 Meiklewood Road, Glasgow G51 4GB

